HUBERT ROBERT (Paris 1733 - Paris 1808)

Wooded Landscape with a Washerwoman at a Fountain

Red chalk counterproof.

Laid down on a late 18th or early 19th century mount.

Dated 7. Avril 1771 and inscribed H. Robert pour L'abbé de St. Non. in the margin of the mount.

365 x 290 mm. (14 3/8 x 11 3/8 in.) [sheet]

422 x 348 mm. (16 5/8 x 13 5/8 in.) [mount]

Like Fragonard, Hubert Robert often made counterproofs of his red chalk drawings. This was an essential task, since by making a counterproof any excess red chalk dust – which otherwise might easily smear - would be removed from the original drawing. At times, the artist would extensively rework the counterproof, adding pen, ink and wash and watercolour to create a second finished, albeit reversed, version of the original composition. A large number of red chalk counterproofs of landscapes by Robert, mainly from the collection of the 18th century architect Pierre-Adrien Pâris, are today in the Musée des Beaux-Arts et d'Archéologie in Besançon.

The date of 1771 inscribed on the old mount may be accurate, as the present sheet would certainly seem to date from after Robert's return to France from Italy in 1765. By the early 1770's he had developed his mature style as a draughtsman, creating attractive landscapes and pastoral scenes with a refined and subtle use of red chalk.

According to the inscription on the mount, this drawing was once in the collection of Robert's friend and patron, Jean-Claude Richard, Abbé de Saint-Non (1727-1791).

Provenance:

Jean-Claude Richard, abbé de Saint-Non (according to the inscription on the mount).

Artist description:

A student of the sculptor Michel-Ange Slodtz, Hubert Robert travelled to Rome in 1754 in the retinue of the new French ambassador to the Vatican, the future Duc de Choiseul. It was probably through the influence of Choiseul that, although he was not officially a pensionnaire at the Académie de France in Rome, the young Robert was able to study there for several years. Succinctly described by the director of the Académie de France, Charles-Joseph Natoire, as a young man 'who has a penchant for painting architecture' ('qui a du goût pour peindre l'architecture'), Robert spent a total of eleven years in Italy, mostly in Rome. He fell under the particular influence of Giovanni Paolo Panini, the leading Italian painter of architectural views and capricci, who taught perspective at the Académie de France. Robert's earliest paintings and drawings, both in composition and technique, are greatly indebted to the example of Panini. At the Académie de France Robert met and befriended Jean-Honoré Fragonard, and with him made sketching tours of the countryside around Rome.

Robert returned to Paris in 1765, and the following year was admitted into the Académie Royale as a 'peintre des ruines', rather unusually being both reçu and agréé in the same year. He made his debut at the Salon in 1767, exhibiting picturesque landscapes and capricci, and soon had developed such a reputation for paintings of real and imagined Roman views, often incorporating ancient ruins, that he was given the sobriquet 'Robert des Ruines'. A versatile artist, Robert often repeated and developed favourite views or compositions in several different formats, including chalk drawings, finished watercolours, small cabinet pictures and large-scale wall paintings. Appointed dessinateur des jardins du roi in 1778, Robert was also able to incorporate his artistic ideas into his landscape designs for gardens at Versailles and elsewhere. Despite being imprisoned during the Revolution, he remained a significant figure in the artistic scene in Paris until the end of the century.
