The Villa Aldobrandini at Frascati, some twenty kilometres southeast of Rome, was originally built in 1550 and renovated by Cardinal Pietro Aldobrandini from 1598 onwards. The extensive gardens of the villa were completed by the early 1620s, with several water features fed by a newly-built aqueduct. Hubert Robert produced several drawings of the Villa Aldobrandini and its gardens during his eleven-year stay in Italy between 1754 and 1765, and continued to make drawings inspired by the villa after his return to Paris.

The present sheet is closely related to a larger drawing of the same subject and composition, drawn in pen and brown ink and brown wash alone, in the collection of the Musée des Beaux-Arts et d'Archéologie in Besançon. Both drawings can in turn be associated with a red chalk drawing by Robert of washerwomen at a fountain in Frascati, dated 1775, in the Musée des Beaux-Arts in Valence, in which, however, the niche with a statue in the background seen in the present sheet is replaced with a tall doorway. The same setting, with some differences in architectural detail and staffage, occurs in an earlier counterproof drawing in red chalk by Robert, dated 1761, in the Bibliothèque Municipale in Besançon, while a small preparatory pen and ink sketch of the same view is part of an album of drawings by Robert in the Louvre.

Artist description:

A student of the sculptor Michel-Ange Slodtz, Hubert Robert travelled to Rome in 1754 in the retinue of the new French ambassador to the Vatican, the future Duc de Choiseul. It was probably through the influence of Choiseul that, although he was not officially a pensionnaire at the Académie de France in Rome, the young Robert was able to study there for several years. Succinctly described by the director of the Académie de France, Charles-Joseph Natoire, as a young man 'who has a penchant for painting architecture' ('qui a du goût pour peindre l'architecture'), Robert spent a total of eleven years in Italy, mostly in Rome. He fell under the particular influence of Giovanni Paolo Panini, the leading Italian painter of architectural views and capricci, who taught perspective at the Académie de France. Robert's earliest paintings and drawings, both in composition and technique, are greatly indebted to the example of Panini. At the Académie de France Robert met and befriended Jean-Honoré Fragonard, and with him made sketching tours of the countryside around Rome.

Robert returned to Paris in 1765, and the following year was admitted into the Académie Royale as a 'peintre des ruines', rather unusually being both reçu and agréé in the same year. He made his debut at the Salon in 1767, exhibiting picturesque landscapes and capricci, and soon had developed such a reputation for paintings of real and imagined Roman views, often incorporating ancient ruins, that he was given the sobriquet 'Robert des Ruines'. A versatile artist, Robert often repeated and developed favourite views or compositions in several different formats, including chalk drawings, finished watercolours, small cabinet pictures and large-scale wall paintings. Appointed dessinateur des jardins du roi in 1778, Robert was also able to incorporate his artistic ideas into his landscape designs for gardens at Versailles and elsewhere. Despite being imprisoned during the Revolution, he remained a significant figure in the artistic scene in Paris until the end of the century.
