Hubert ROBERT (Paris 1733 - Paris 1808)

Laundresses at a Fountain near a Palace in Genoa

Pen and black ink, with touches of watercolour and white heightening, over a red chalk counterproof.

Inscribed dessiné d'après nature à gènes in the lower margin.

Numbered 9486 on the verso of the old mount.

Stamped with the drystamp of the late 18th century mountmaker François Renaud (Lugt 1042) at the lower right corner.

284 x 358 mm. (11 1/8 x 14 1/8 in.)

The present sheet is a drawn over a red chalk counterproof. Like Fragonard, Hubert Robert often made counterproofs of his drawings in both black and red chalk. This was an essential task, since by making a counterproof, any excess chalk dust – which otherwise might easily smear - would be removed from the original drawing. Often, the artist would then extensively rework the counterproof, adding pen, ink and wash and watercolour to create a finished, reversed version of the original composition; such is the case with the present sheet, which was likely to have been executed as an autonomous work of art for sale to a collector.

The original red chalk drawing for the present composition is today in the collection of the Staatliche Kunsthalle in Karlsruhe. Like the present sheet, the Karlsruhe drawing is also on a Renaud mount.

This finished drawing is inscribed as having been done in Genoa, which the artist presumably visited on his journey back to France from Rome in 1765. Only a handful of drawings or paintings of Genoese subjects by Robert are known, however. A painting of washerwomen by the staircase of the Palazzo Durazzo (now Durazzo Pallavicini) in Genoa, signed and dated 1772, was formerly in the collection of Felix Rohatyn and was recently sold at auction, while a related drawing in black chalk of the same scene appeared at auction in London in 1985.

This drawing bears the drystamp of François Renaud, one of the leading mountmakers in Paris in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Working from a shop on the rue Feydeau in Paris, Renaud is thought to have also acted occasionally as a dealer in prints and drawings.

Artist description:

A student of the sculptor Michel-Ange Slodtz, Hubert Robert travelled to Rome in 1754 in the retinue of the new French ambassador to the Vatican, the future Duc de Choiseul. It was probably through the influence of Choiseul that, although he was not officially a pensionnaire at the Académie de France in Rome, the young Robert was able to study there for several years. Succinctly described by the director of the Académie de France, Charles-Joseph Natoire, as a young man 'who has a penchant for painting architecture' ('qui a du goût pour peindre l'architecture'), Robert spent a total of eleven years in Italy, mostly in Rome. He fell under the particular influence of Giovanni Paolo Panini, the leading Italian painter of architectural views and capricci, who taught perspective at the Académie de France. Robert's earliest paintings and drawings, both in composition and technique, are greatly indebted to the example of Panini. At the Académie de France Robert met and befriended Jean-Honoré Fragonard, and with him made sketching tours of the countryside around Rome.

Robert returned to Paris in 1765, and the following year was admitted into the Académie Royale as a 'peintre des ruines', rather unusually being both reçu and agréé in the same year. He made his debut at the Salon in 1767, exhibiting picturesque landscapes and capricci, and soon had developed such a reputation for paintings of real and imagined Roman views, often incorporating ancient ruins, that he was given the sobriquet 'Robert des Ruines'. A versatile artist, Robert often repeated and developed favourite views or compositions in several different formats, including chalk drawings, finished watercolours, small cabinet pictures and large-scale wall paintings. Appointed dessinateur des jardins du roi in 1778, Robert was also able to incorporate his artistic ideas into his landscape designs for gardens at Versailles and elsewhere. Despite being imprisoned during the Revolution, he remained a significant figure in the artistic scene in Paris until the end of the century.
